Continuance of Title I Program Approved By School Board

Chairman - Vice Chairman Elected

In regular session on Friday, July 11, the Appomattox County School Board gave their approval to the federally funded Title I program for 1975-76. Designed to supplement the reading and math instruction of children in grades one through four, the Title I program for 1975-76 will remain basically unchanged from the program implemented in 1974-75.

The program will have a total budget of $125,140 for the coming year, while services for approximately 250 students will be provided.

The budget includes funds for five Title I teachers, 16 instructional aides (1 more than last year), teaching materials, and one secretary.

Test scores for students receiving instruction under the Title I program have showed encouraging progress and the Board hopes to maintain this upward trend in scores by continuing the program.

The Title I Parent Advisory Committee, which meets several times a year to provide input into the Title I program, was also approved by the Board.

Lyle N. Garrette, member-at-large, was elected Chairman of the School Board for the coming year, suceeding J. Berkeley Drinkard, Jr. A farmer and rural mail carrier from Concord, Garrette has been on the School Board for ten years.

Serving as vice-chairman for 1975-76 will be the representative from Stonewall district, Dr. A. A. Fratrick.

In other action, the Board appointed Mrs. Mary M. Holt clerk for 1975-76, while Mrs. Etta R. Inge will be deputy clerk.

The student accident insurance policy of Pilot Life was renewed by the Board for another year, following a recommendation in favor of this policy by R. B. Carter, director of vocational education and chairman of the Student Insurance Policy Committee. Carter reported that the student fee for the insurance policy will cost four dollars, a fifty cent increase over the previous year.

Hans Varner Accepts Pastorate at 7th Day Adventist Church

The Appomattox Seventh-Day Adventist Church is now under the pastoral care of Hans Varner who follows the ministry of R. H. Broderson, who was recently assigned to the Harrisonburg church district.

Arriving Sunday, July 13, with his wife, Celeste, and two daughters, Pamela (age 4), and April (age 1), the Varners moved into the home of Elder Broderson situated on Dogwood Circle.

Pastor Varner received his ministerial education at Columbia Union College, a Seventh-Day Adventist liberal arts college nestled in Takoma Park, Md. Continuing graduate work in the Seminary at Andrews University, Berrien Springs, Michigan, he received the Master of Divinity degree in 1974. After interning in the Vienna-Fairfax area he was assigned by the Potomac Conference of Seventh-Day Adventists to assume responsibilities in the Appomattox Church.

Pastor Varner follows R. H. Broderson, who has been in the Appomattox Church for the past two years, and will work with Austin Goodwin, the associate pastor, who plans to attend the seminary this winter.

"More About Jesus" will be the title of his first sermon, to be delivered Saturday, July 19, in the 11:15 worship hour service. The Appomattox Seventh-Day Adventist Church, located on Court Street between the Robinson Funeral Home and the Times-Virginian, conducts church services on Saturday, with Sabbath School at 10 a.m., worship hour at 11:15.

Supervisors Reluctantly Enact Soil Erosion Control Ordinance

Normal Agricultural Activities Unaffected

The Appomattox Board of Supervisors, in the words of member O. W. Martin, "reluctantly accepted the wishes of the state" in passing a soil erosion and sediment control ordinance required by state law.

Although the three board members vociferously opposed the ordinance, they passed the measure at Friday's meeting, since failure by local governing bodies to pass an ordinance would allow the state to set standards for erosion control.

The supervisors, to prevent this state intervention in Appomattox County affairs, approved the absolute minimum standards for the ordinance. Thus the enacted ordinance, effective January 1, 1976, requires the filing of a siltation plan for tracts of land over 10,000 square feet cleared for commercial purposes.

Industrial sites, shopping centers, and housing developments are the primary concern of the measure, as Chairman John C. Cole said that normal agricultural practices are exempt from the regulation.

The ordinance will also be in effect for the Town of Appomattox as Town Manager W. S. Slagle reported that the Town Council had agreed to abide by the decision of the Board of Supervisors.

Opposition to the ordinance at the Friday afternoon hearing was unanimous. A local grading contractor, David Nash, felt that Richmond was pushing too many things on the people and it had to stop somewhere. But realizing that local inaction would allow state agencies to formulate an ordinance, Nash urged the Board to pass the law, but not enforce it.

O. H. Tolley, supervisor representing the Clover Hill district, said that "he hated to do it since no one wants it."

In expressing his reservations about the regulation, O. W. Martin feared that the state would become more stringent in the future and remove the exemption on agriculture now present in the ordinance.

J. F. Blair of the Virginia Soil and Conservation Commission explained that the ordinance, which is designed to provide "an orderly plan to control siltation," holds the owner or leasee responsible, with violation of the law punishable by a maximum fine of $1,000 or 30 days in jail, or both.

In other business, the Board approved an appropriation request of $79,000 made by Lloyd Walton, Appomattox County Superintendent.

Wallace Clair, Executive Director of Central Virginia Commission on Aging, provided the Board with information on the budget and programs of the commission.

Finally, the Board of Supervisors announced that all polling placed used in previous years will be open in November, including the Cheatwood and Chap facilities.

Virginia Fibre Draws Workforce From Surrounding Counties

On Monday, June 23, 1975, the final group of the total workforce of 116 production, service and maintenance people reported to their jobs at the new Virginia Fibre containerboard mill in Riverville, Virginia in the initiation of production start-up, then three to four weeks away. This was the first time the full complement had been on hand, and there was an unmistakable look of excitement at the site.

While some 46 highly skilled and experienced people from other parts of the country had necessarily been assembled by the Company to handle highly technical assignments requiring prior paper mill experience, the balance of the positions at the ultra-modern facility were filled by people from the immediate area. From the surrounding counties Virginia Fibre has hired 70 people of varying skill levels to key spots, as well as an additional 18 people - again all local - to essential clerical jobs. During construction of the mill, several local people who had been hired by the general contractor were employed full time by Virginia Fibre.

In addition, Virginia Fibre has become a secure source of income for 250 to 300 independent wood producers in the area. The mill's initial design capacity calls for 3,500 cords of pulpwood per week which logically will come from local producers.

As start-up approaches on schedule for Virginia Fibre, Virginians themselves can take pride in helping to establish a new company with a particularly apropos first name.

Bloodmobile Visit Set For July 29

The need for blood does not lessen during the summer. In fact, sometimes it even increases due to the large volume of vacationing tourists on the highways making accidents more probable.

The Red Cross Bloodmobile will make its first visit of the fiscal year to Appomattox on Tues., July 29. The visit will once again be held at Liberty Baptist Church from noon until 6 p.m. with a quota for the visit set at 102 units of blood.

The Junior Woman's Club sponsors the blood program in Appomattox County. The Rev. Earnie Lucas is Chairman of the Blood Program assisted by Mrs. Lucy Harvey and Mrs. Mary Katherine Whitehead, representative from the Junior Woman's Club.

A nursery will be provided during the hours of the visit for parents who wish to donate a unit of blood.

Seventeen year olds are reminded that they may donate blood with parental consent and are encouraged to begin this habit as soon as possible, and continue to be a regular blood donor.

"You may not be dying to give blood, but some day you may be dying to receive it."

Title I Advisory Council Met Monday Afternoon

The Appomattox Title I Advisory Council met Monday, July 14, 1975, to consider the implementation and progress of the program.

Mr. Walton, Division Superintendent, extended greetings to the Council. He also expressed appreciation to the parents for giving of their time and cooperation.

Mrs. Hezleine Foster presented to the Council plans approved for the Student Migratory Program which will be initiated at the High School in September.

The Migratory Project is funded under Title I and will provide a program to strengthen reading skills of eligible students whose achievement is below their expected performance. Funds are provided in this project for one teacher and two instructional aides.

The Title I Elementary Program operates in the Pamplin, Appomattox Primary and Appomattox Elementary Schools. Students in the first, second, third, and fourth grades participate in this program and receive supplemental instruction in reading and mathematics. This assistance is given over and above the work given by the regular classroom teacher. Five teachers and sixteen instructional aides are employed in this area. The program objectives specify that comprehen-

Appomattox Resident Has First Book Published

After thirty years of employment with the government, twenty-one of which were spent as electrician and presidential kennel keeper at The White House, Traphes Bryant of Appomattox says "it was an interesting place to work but I am glad to be settled in a friendly town like Appomattox." Bryant and his wife now reside on a 114 acre farm just off the Hixburg Road.

His book, based on a diary he kept while employed in the executive mansion serving as electrician during the Truman administration (he had no pet dogs) and then as electrician-kennel keeper through a part of the Nixon administration, entitled Dog Days At The White House and co-authored by Frances Spatz Leighton went on sale July 15, 1975. The book is published by Macmillan Publishers Company of New York with 25,000 copies printed in the first edition.

Bryant, in Washington, D.C. on Friday of last week, autographed copies of his book at the Brentanons Book Store, one of the largest in that area, prior to an official kick-off promotional tour that is scheduled to begin on July 23, 1975 with an appearance and interview on the popular TODAY television show. Following the TODAY show appearance, he will begin a three week tour that will include stops for radio and television shows in Boston, Pittsburg, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Dallas and Houston. In the June 23 edition of Newsweek there was an article about Bryant and his book. He also has been interviewed by Roger Langley of the World News and an article in that magazine is scheduled for publication in mid-July and more recently he was interviewed by Helen Thomas, famous UPI correspondent.

As he quietly went about his daily duties, Traphes Bryant became privy to many revealing off-the-record details about the Presidents, from Truman to Nixon, and their families. Taken from his diary, Dog Days At The White House is an irreverent and gossipy account of the private lives of some very public figures. On sale now in many book stores at $9.95 a copy, you will enjoy reading this interesting book that includes more than 65 pictures of life at the White House.
